Abstract

This research undertakes a comprehensive analysis of the astrological factors that may reveal an individual's potential for professional success in the cinematic arts. Rooted in the esteemed principles of the Brihat Parasara Hora Shastra, it develops a detailed framework for identifying celestial indicators critical to achieving excellence in film and mass communication. The study meticulously examines the intricate relationships between planetary configurations and the dynamic interactions of astrological houses in the natal chart, with a particular focus on the third and fifth houses. It delves into the influence of key celestial bodies—such as Venus, the Moon, and Rahu—in nurturing the essential qualities and opportunities crucial for prominence in the film industry. Furthermore, the research seeks to elucidate the predictive capabilities of astrological insights, proposing methodologies to assess an individual's likelihood of success. Thus, it contributes to the scholarly conversation surrounding the nuanced relationship between astrology and professional success in the fields of film and mass communication.

Introduction

Kasturi ^[1] posited that Venus, as a potent signification of both the fifth and 10th cusps, also suggests a career in this domain.

Leena ^[2] asserted that the assessment of a career in the entertainment industry should involve the 1st, 2nd, third, 4th, 5th, 7th, 10th, 11th, and 12th houses.

Raj ^[3] has asserted that the 2nd, 6th, 10th, and 11th houses are pivotal in determining an individual's career in the film industry.

Akash ^[4] expressed that Venus, Mercury, Rahu, the Sun, and nakshatras such as Bharani, Rohini, Mrigisira, Magha, Purva Phalguni, Chitra, Swati, Purva Ashadha, and Revati play a significant role in shaping an acting career.

Pavan ^[5] contends that a strong Venus, Jupiter, and Sun, along with a robust fifth house, will facilitate a successful career in this industry.

This study examines the astrological factors that may signal an individual's potential for success in the film and mass communication industry. It highlights the significance of key planetary alignments and specific houses, particularly the third and fifth, along with their lords, in relation to Venus, the Moon, and Rahu, in fostering essential qualities for achievement. By shedding light on these insights, this research enhances the academic discourse on the relationship between astrology and excellence in acting and mass communication.

Methods and Materials

To assess an individual's potential for a career in acting or mass communication, it is essential to analyse the natal chart, focusing on the relationships between the third house, the fifth house, and their respective lords, particularly in relation to Venus, the Moon, or Rahu. The presence of these connections in the chart signifies a strong likelihood of success in these fields. For insights into the influences of Venus (linked to drama and the arts), the Moon (representing expression, sentiment, and emotion), Rahu (associated with name and fame), the third house (connected to enthusiasm, decision-making, and courage), and the fifth house (relating to thought, skill, and intelligence), refer to Chapters 3, 11, 14, and 16 of the Brihat Parashara Hora Shastra [6]. This study establishes a framework to evaluate an individual's potential as an actor, actress or anchor, with specific rules detailed in Table 1 below. The existence of any of these rules within a natal chart indicates a likelihood of pursuing or achieving success in acting, media, or related careers.

Conclusion

This study explored the relationship between astrological factors and individual success in acting or mass communication, establishing a robust framework centred on the influence of the third and fifth houses along with Venus, the Moon, and Rahu. The findings enhance our understanding of astrology's predictive capabilities in these fields and provide a foundation for future research. Additionally, the study acknowledges that other planetary combinations may also influence success, warranting further exploration in future research efforts.
